During stress conditions, the production of Vitamin C within the body decreases and becomes insufficient to meet the bird's requirements. Sorbitol and Dextrose play an important role in regulating the synthesis of Vitamin C within the body.

A combination of Vitamin C, Dextrose, and Sorbitol dramatically improves immunity and overall cellular health. Dextrose helps increase weight and muscle with a rapid boost of energy and nourishment and Sorbitol provides instant energy for liver metabolism.

Vitamin C, an antioxidant, plays an important role in protecting the birds from free radical-induced damage. The inclusion of vitamin C in the diet has also been known to influence calcium metabolism, with improved bone and egg-shell mineralization, increased immunity, feed intake, weight gain, carcass weight, etc. in birds.
